6 HURT IN HIGHWAY CRASHES

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN
THE Christmas story is told by William T. Ellis in the current issue of Editor Publisher, New York, with The Three Wise Men in the role of news reporters carrying out an assignment, writing down what they saw, leaving others to ponder on the meaning.

Revival in Capital Goods Industries Brightens Future

1935 Saw Largest Orders for Machine Tools, Factories, Since 1929

AN ALL-TIME PEAK Sales of Gasoline, Cigarettes and Wool Exceed Even 1929 Record

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK —(AP)— Uncle Sam struggled into the seven league boots of revived business initiative in 1935, to hasten the march to better times. With businessmen once more ready to build factories and introduce new product, a new year dawned with high hopes of restoration of broad economic well-being than has accompanied the start of a new fiscal period in a long time.

Unemployment figures still loom large, but business analysts have noted distinct signs during the past few months of a transition to a new and broader phase of recovery which may mean big gains in jobs.

New Investment Funds

These signs include some of the largest orders for machine tools since 1929; electric power production even exceeding the boomtime records, with sales of such recent creations of mass-production industry as electric refrigerators, air conditioning equipment and automatic home heating machinery, set new highs; a pronounced pickup in residential construction, and the breaking of the ice-jam in the flow of new capital.

These indicators point to a revival in the lagging capital goods industries—those lines activated by the historic urge of Americans to build, tear down and rebuild better, to add even new products to the national grist of material goods.

Recovery thus far, including that of the past year, has been concentrated in consumers goods. Sweeping gains were recorded in 1935 in production and sales of those things put to immediate use by the public. The largest number of automobiles was manufactured since 1929, and even 1929 records were broken by gasoline, cigarette and wool consumption.

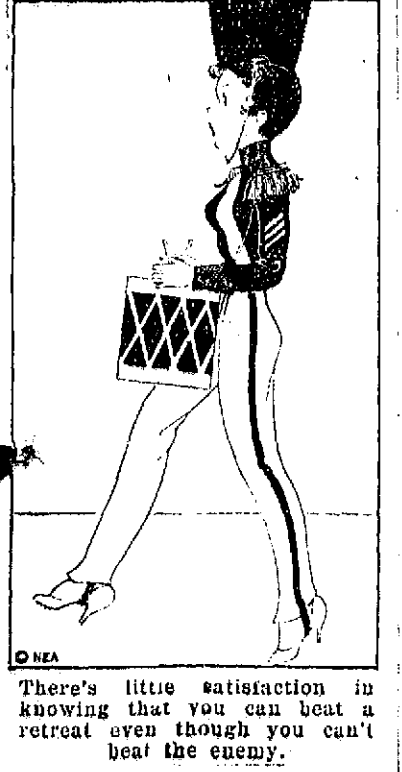

Rebuilding Wave

Less significance is seen in the jump of production in consumers goods, than in the indications that a new wave of rebuilding and modernization may be starting. This may begin to cut into the totals of unemployed. The flurry in consumers goods has made limited progress in restoring employment during the past two years. For October, the national industrial conference board estimated unemployed at 9,196,000, only 712,000 under a year previously, and 728,000 under two years previously.

The problem of how much lack of work may be due to increasing use of labor-saving machinery remains the subject of keen controversy, but experts widely acknowledge that building and modernization, together with production, distribution and service.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

There's little satisfaction in knowing that you can beat a retreat even though you can't beat the enemy.

"To the one wofeful group in the vicinity the news first came," writes Mr. Ellis, "These were the little company of shepherds a mile or so distant from town, guarding, from wolves and predatory prowlers from the East, the temple sheep on the hillside where once David, the shepherd-king, had tended his father's flock. These men were accessible, and reasonably foot-loose, so that they could act upon any intelligence imparted to them."

"Therefore it was to them that the greatest 'News Tip' of the ages was given. A mysterious messenger miraculously stood in the midst and told them the fact—a simple fact, but of stupendous significance."

"What journalism calls the 'news sense' of these shepherds was strong. They set out at once to verify the strange story that had come to them amidst so many incomprehensible marvels. Why has nobody ever remarked upon the editorial discrimination in the minds of these men, which made them differentiate distinctly between their own tremendous experience and the tidings they had been told? Most persons would have run home straightaway, to tell their own tale, and to bask in the light of the miracle that had befallen them."

"Not so these shepherds. They held fast to their assignment, and set out with haste to verify the central fact. Overwhelming as had been their own experience, it was of less importance than the news that had been imparted to them. They might even have discredited the whole affair, and attributed it to an apparition or a subjective experience; but the fact that had been told them remained to be substantiated."

X X X
"They had been told of a Messiah come; and, lo, he was but a little red infant sleeping in the common rockswoman manger of a hillside stable."

"The incongruity of it all did not baffle or silence these reporters. They simply told the facts as they had discovered them. The meaning of it all would be for the editors to point out subsequently; they confined themselves to relating what they had found out."

"So to Mary and Joseph; to the company of humble folk in the stable who had been awakened by their entrance, and, later, to their own families and neighbors, the shepherds told their news; which spread until the country-side rang with it; and then the nation, and then the world."

Once released, the facts could not be hidden, or kept from having the effect. That is why it has come to pass that today, wherever civilization has penetrated, humanity repeats and does honor to the Good News first told by a little company of unlettered shepherds turned newsgatherers and reporters."

License Deduction From Sales Tax on Car Is Prohibited

Offset Provided by Hall Law Invalidated by Supreme Court

REFUNDING UPHELD

Court Throws Out $22,000 Judgment Previously Awarded Refinery

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The price of the state automobile license may not be deducted from the sales tax due on the purchase of an automobile, the Arkansas Supreme Court held Monday.

The high tribunal held that the automobile license constitutes a tax for the privilege of using the public highways and this tax could not be deducted from the sales tax due on a car purchase.

Refunding Board Upheld

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The Arkansas Supreme Court held Monday that the duties of the State Refunding Board are not solely ministerial, and reversed and dismissed a Pulaski circuit court decision which held that the National Refining company was entitled to payment of approximately $22,000.

Holding it was within the discretion of the state board to use its best judgment in state highway indebtedness refunding, the supreme court said. "It would be an anomalous situation if the General Assembly in constituting these executive officers to be called from the discharge of their important, essential duties to assemble as a board to perform a mere ministerial duty."

14 Die When Bus Plunges in River

Greyhound Coach Goes Through Open Drawbridge in Virginia

HOPEWELL, Va.—(AP)—An inquest was ordered Monday for Thursday in the deaths of 14 persons who lost their lives in the plunge of a bus through an open drawbridge into the Appomattox river Sunday.

Two more bodies were identified Monday, bringing to seven the total of identified dead.

Police Chief George Anderson said he had identified one as Mrs. L. W. Fairfax, of Superior, Wis., and another body as that of Lillian Fairfax, of the same address.

Plunge Through Draw

HOPEWELL, Va.—(AP)—Fourteen persons met death in the icy Appomattox river Sunday when an Aultman Greyhound bus plunged through an open drawbridge.

The dead, 12, still unidentified, were nine white women, three white men, and two negro women, the driver, L. G. Alford, and J. B. Belch of Hopewell, who escaped from the bus and was rescued, but later died.

The huge bus, on route from Richmond, Va., to Raleigh, N. C., when raised from the 30-foot channel of the river showed the breaks on full and the driver at his seat.

One couple, seated side by side in one of the front seats, had been eating walnuts and each held a walnut lightly in their hands, the young man having his arm around the girl, who apparently was his wife. She wore a wedding ring.

A wrist watch on the arm of one man was stopped at 8:55, which witnesses said was the hour of the plunge.

Thousands watched the work, held back by lines of state police, Salvation Army girls and Red Cross nurses distributed hot coffee and fruit to the tired workers on the ice-coated bridge and barge.

The cause of the accident was not determined. A long straight-away approach on a fill leads to the draw span, the road rising slightly to the approach. The bridge, just down a hill from Hopewell, was open to permit a tug and barge to go up the river.

The bridge attendant, Larry McNair, said he was looking down the river when he heard the bus crash through a guard gate 10 feet from the bridge.

"I jerked my head around to see what was happening," he said. "Just as I turned I saw the bus start its downward plunge. It was a terrible sight. Women and children were screaming and I could see them all falling forward as the bus rolled over."

French Pledge to Support England Against Italians

Allies Conclude Agreement Looking to Enforcing Oil Boycott

A POLICY OF IRON

Great Britain Clears Away to "Crack Down" on War-Like Italy

LONDON, Eng.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Satisfactory consultations have been concluded, it was learned Monday, between the British and French general staffs, involving mutual support by the armies and navies of both countries in the event of an attack by Italian desperation.

This revelation came on the heels of Anthony Eden as secretary for British foreign affairs.

His selection gave impetus to Great Britain's fresh policy for the application of sanctions against Italy and armed resistance to any hostile act against nations imposing these war penalties.

Copyright Associated Press

LONDON, Eng.—Great Britain chose young Anthony Eden for her foreign secretary Monday and announced a far-reaching army reorganization scheme in the face of louder war talk over Europe.

Italy at once took appointment of 38-year-old Eden as a direct slap. Italians have learned to dislike him intensely because of his forceful leadership as British minister for League of Nations affairs, of Geneva's sanction siege. Eden succeeds Sir Samuel Hoag, co-author of the Anglo-French peace "mistake."

It was said the post of League minister would be discontinued by Baldwin and that Eden will exercise authority over all branches of the nation's foreign affairs.

Eden's appointment was viewed in London as the sharpest warning to Italy that Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin could make that Great Britain is maintaining a strong lead at Geneva for sanctions. It was said authoritatively that Britain will push for oil and other sanctions as soon as all Mediterranean countries have promised to support her in case of an Italian attack.

Rome declined to comment officially, but just before the announcement of Eden's appointment came from No. 10 Downing street, a spokesman there told the Associated Press:

"The appointment of Eden would be a menace to peace."

Italy went on with resistance to sanctions. More women by the hundreds exchanged gold for riron wedding rings; Crown Prince Umberto turned in his collar of the Order of the Annunziata, one of the kingdom's most coveted decorations.

Official sources, although pointing to Premier Mussolini's recent words, "We shall march straight on," added: "We still are willing to study peace proposals if they are considerably more serious than these last two."

The reference was to the defunct Anglo-French plan for Ethiopian peace by means of territorial concessions to Italy.

Premier Pierre Laval, in Paris, set about his task of trying to keep France out of war.

His nation, said Paris advices, seemed alarmed at the prospect of having to aid Great Britain in event of an Italian attack in the Mediterranean or Egypt.

The premier's difficulties were all the greater because of the French policy of following the League covenant fully in hope of British assistance in case of a fallout from Germany. The French, it appeared, were disclaiming responsibility for whatever may happen and looking to Great Britain for "prudence."

By the Associated Press
The death of blind Senator Thomas D. Schall of Minnesota as the result of a hit-and-run accident and the drowning of 14 persons at Hopewell, Va., where a bus plunged through an open drawbridge, intensified tragedy of the nation's week-end traffic accidents which killed 134 persons.

Senator Schall's death, remarked, "I wonder how long this reckless destruction of life will go on in the streets and highways of the United States."

Heavy tolls in six states made the week-end death list one of the largest of the year.

Second Accident Occurs 5 Miles East of Hope on Highway 67

Six persons were injured in a series of automobile accidents on slippery, snow-soaked highways over the country during the week-end.

The casualties included four residents of Hempstead county and an elderly couple from Hot Springs. The victims:

Near Washington

The accident involving King, Rowe and Bruce occurred about 8 p. m. Saturday a few miles this side of Washington.

A truck operated by new driver in a ditch. King stopped to lend aid. Both vehicles were headed north, with a mule attempting to pull the truck out of the ditch.

A car driven by a youth named Webb of Ozan and also occupied by Bruce approached, driving south. The car struck Rowe and King, and killed the mule. The car then bounded into a ditch and overturned.

The accident involving Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Allen occurred Sunday on Highway 67, five miles east of Hope. Mr. and Mrs. Allen enroute to Dallas, came upon Campbell driving a herd of cattle across the highway.

Takes to Ditch
In trying to avert a crash the driver took the ditch and overturned. It later developed that Campbell had a broken leg. Reports are conflicting as to how the leg was broken. One report is that he was struck by the car. Another is that he fell to the ground, sustaining the injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen were brought to Josephine hospital and treated by Dr. G. E. Cannon, classmate of Mr. Allen at Ouachita college 40 years ago.

A car owned by John Trees of Emmet skidded into a bridge early Saturday night west of Fulton on Highway 67. No one was injured. The car was badly damaged. Slippery pavement was blamed.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

After the proteins and the carbohydrates in our food, in order of importance, come the fats.

There is a limit to the amount of fat we can eat, but whatever we do take in provides about nine times the energy or caloric value of stored proteins, or of glycogen, which is carbohydrate.

Furthermore, fats have their chief value in the human body as the carriers of vitamins, which are found more abundantly in them than in any other foods. Vitamin D and vitamin A, especially are found in fats. They are known as the fat-soluble vitamins.

But, there is that of the tissue, and that stored up to provide the body with materials in times of starvation. Carbohydrates, when taken in excess, may be deposited in the body in the form of fat. But when carbohydrates and proteins are stored in the body, they retain at least three parts of water. Fats may be deposited in the body without water.

When fats are digested, most of the process takes place in the duodenum, or upper part of the small intestine. The ferments which take care of this digestion are the bile, that comes from the pancreas and the bile which comes from the liver.

Fats are not as well used by the body as carbohydrates or proteins. Physiologists have had a hard time centers threatening to rob New York of its leadership in the field.

This book sets forth all this history, contains brief critiques of some scores of American painters, and presents innumerable reproductions of representative American canvases. All in all, it is a valuable and interesting book.

Published by Reynal and Hitchcock, it sells for $2.75.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Glorious time of great too-much." So has Christmas been described.

And in many ways I agree. There are, for instance, the feet of tired clerks. Weary postmen and sleepless delivery boys.

Actually I don't believe there can be too much Christmas as far as merry-making goes, but the mechanical end of it, shopping and Christmas cards all piled into the last four or five days, lays a penalty on those who do much to serve us.

Recently I wrote an article about the unwisdom of beginning the holiday season, a month before Christmas. Marcus, it was, who had his fill of Santa and toy departments long before the great day arrived.

A merchant read that story and although he agreed with me, explained that business people had been driven to early decorations and advertising, not to sell MORE (because the family purse is pretty well budgeted) but to SPREAD the buying. "Some people hear the ringing of the circus until they hear the clapping of the said."

Late Shopping Causes Delay

"It is the same way with holiday trade. Not only that, but we cannot tell just what type of article will prove popular and run out. Re-orders take time and often the identical piece of merchandise cannot be procured, without a search. We have to allow for that. One of our chief difficulties at Christmas is to accommodate the late shopper and procure for her a special book she wants for her son or a particular doll for her daughter in time to put under the tree. If these do not materialize before Christmas, it is just too bad. No one wants to disappoint children, neither does a storekeeper. We used to urge early shopping. Now we have learned the psychology of the late buyer and hang up the holly the first of December or earlier."

A photographer said practical the same thing. "There used to be more disappointments about family pictures than anything else," he admitted. "Most photographers now are prepared to take care of the late-comers and do miracles with retouching and finishing. They work all night for weeks and hire extra people for the emergency. Few pictures are actually promised that cannot be delivered, even at the last moment."

But getting the Best for Money

But making a mother who has put her all in that family group for Daddy has paced the floor for days, then flayed the mailman for losing the packet she is looking for. It arrived on Christmas Eve, but in the meantime she has lost sleep. Yes, surely we welcome the late comers. Were in business, aren't we? We want and need the trade. I am trying to show merely that if people could manage to attend to things earlier they would save themselves worry and get the best for their money."

But as for me, I see the tired ones whose idea of Christmas is to stay in bed all day with a box of aspirin near.

Many cannot help the last-minute foray into the shops. This is legitimate and excusable. But it is well to understand that good-nature go along and patience.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

The woman who has trouble putting her makeup on smoothly and evenly so she will look the same day after day (not the next) should experiment with different kinds of rouge and spend a good deal of time learning how to put them on correctly.

Rouge never should be blended below the imaginary line from the end of the nose to the tip of the ear. Keep it well up on your cheek bones where pink would show if you had a naturally high color. Don't put it on your ears, hollow in your throat, eyelids or under your chin. Pick a shade that makes you look naturally healthy.

Cream or liquid rouge ought to be applied after foundation and before powder. Dry varieties (best for oily skins) should be put on after powder.

Any Old Trinkets?

ITALY NEEDS GOLD

WHAT CAN YOU SPARE?

HERLOCK

F powder, of course, stays on longer and looks smoother if you use a cotton pad to press it firmly against forehead and throat, whisking off the surplus several minutes later. It always should match exactly your complexion, whether you're sun-tanned or lily-white.

Lipstick must be put on from corner to corner and along the inside edges which show when you laugh and talk. Eye makeup, if used at all, should be used sparingly. If you are one who touches your upper lids with a bit of white vaseline, remember that this too, depends on subtlety for flattering effect. Vaseline that runs down at the corners and makes lids look greasy instead of shiny is an ugly sight indeed.

With All My Love

by Mary Raymond

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Forces are at work that threaten the happiness of lovely DANA STANLEY and her attractive husband, DR. SCOTT STANLEY, a struggling young physician. Dana's grandmother, who has hoped she would marry rich ROBERT MOORE, is eager for the marriage to go on the rocks. PAULA LON, who has been hopelessly in love with Scott for years, also hopes the marriage will fail.

Dana's half-sister, NANCY, is deeply in love with Ronald, knowing he loves Dana. She makes her feelings heard in an antagonistic attitude.

Paula goes to Scott's office and asks him to preserve for a mere headline. Scott is puzzled by Paula's hysterical description of her suffering.

Paula tells Dana about having luncheon with Scott, and Dana and Scott almost quarrel when she questions him later.

Scott attends a convention, returning unexpectedly. He finds Dana has gone to a dinner party. He accepts Paula's invitation for a bridge.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX

PAULA'S bridge party had increased to three tables by the time Scott arrived. The big living room looked cheerful and inviting in comparison to the lonely room he had just left.

Paula's apartment was attractive in a gay and colorful way. It was like Paula herself, vivid and insistent. Strips of lavender and green gauze hung at the windows. There were deeper purple velvet hangings, pillows of green and lavender and gold. Bowls of dogwood blossoms made one forget that it was a rainy, dreary April night outside.

There was a great deal of cheerful chatter. And Scott, who had forgotten his resentful, deserted husband feeling of a short while before, created a mild uproar when he related his story—with humorous embellishments—about his own state of mind when he learned Dana was not sitting disconsolately at home, but having a swell time without him.

Drinks were served. Scott thought that Paula was drinking too much. Perhaps that was the reason her bridge game was going so badly. She appeared to be playing mechanically, lost in a vague sort of haze. Scott tried to warn her tactfully. "You'll be calling me tomorrow to prescribe for a real headache, Paula."

"What do you mean tomorrow?" Sam Winchester said, smiling. "It's 2 a. m. now."

"It's not possible!" Scott exclaimed. "Sorry to break up the game, but my wife's at home alone."

"If she was at the Richardsons, you can count on beating her home, at that," Sam said. "Lots of times their guests stay for breakfast."

"Please don't go until we finish this rubber," Paula put in.

It was a long drawn-out rubber, but it ended finally. Then the living room was quickly deserted. Scott and the Winchesters were last to leave. As they were entering the elevator, Paula called, "Just a moment, Scott!"

He went back to her door, with an impatient look toward the elevator as it shot downward. And he resigned himself to a five-minute interlude with Paula. She looked queer, excited.

"What's on your mind?" Scott asked.

For answer, Paula caught his hand, and drew him inside the room.

Since he had left the apartment, five minutes earlier, all the lights except a few shaded wall lamps had been turned off. The room was bathed in a soft glow. Paula was standing close to Scott. Suddenly she put her arms around his neck, pulled his head down toward her face, his lips toward hers.

Scott loosened her arms quickly. "Paula, you've been drinking too much, and don't know what you're doing," he said.

"I do know!" she cried wildly. "Oh, Scott, don't leave me now. Stay, stay!"

Scott's voice was cold and stern. "Go to bed, Paula, and sleep it off." He opened the door and stepped into the hall. Her deep sobs were following him. Not waiting for the elevator, he ran down the steps. He couldn't get into the clean, bracing air soon enough.

DANA had come home from the dinner at 12. And now it was 3. She had stretched a tentative hand toward the other pillow several times during the night. She had turned on the light as often. But Scott was simply not here beside her. He hadn't come in quietly and crawled into bed without disturbing her. Could there have been an accident? Not she couldn't bear such a dreadful thought. Scott drove rapidly lots of times, but he was always careful. May be there had been a blowout. Or perhaps the medical meeting had broken up so late that Scott had decided to stay overnight.

But surely, in that case, he would have telephoned. Dana couldn't dislodge the thought of an accident. By this time she was wide awake, definitely alarmed.

The key grated in the door. Scott entered, tip-toeing in the darkness in clumsy man-fashion, with the hope, Dana realized, of not waking her.

"Scott!" she said, switching on the light by her bed.

"Oh, you are awake, honey?" "I was so worried I couldn't sleep," Dana said. "Where on earth have you been?"

"Where have you been, you mean?" Scott countered gently. "I came home—all the way home—and found that you had been running around to parties, young woman."

Dana laughed. "You didn't stay for the meeting?"

"No, I phoned Bill from the office. I was trying to get up a bridge game, and he told me you were there."

"Didn't he ask you to join us?" "Yes, but I decided to come home."

"You didn't stay long, did you?" "No. It was lonely as the devil without you."

"So you went out to find amusement?"

"What do you think?" Scott

Let Us Keep Christmas

Whatever else be lost among the years, Let us keep Christmas still a shining thing! Whatever doubts assail us, or what fears, Let us hold close one day, remembering its poignant meaning for the hearts of men. Let us get back our childish faith again. Wealth may have taken wings, yet still there are Clear window panes to glow with candle light; There are boughs for garlands, and a tinsel star To tip some little fir tree's lifted height. There is no heart too meagre or too sad But some small gift of love can make it glad. And there are home-sweet rooms where laughter rings, And we can sing the carols as of old. Along the Eastern hills a white star shines: There is an ancient story to be told; There are kind words and cheering words to say, Let us be happy on the Christ Child's Day.—Selected.

One of the most delightful affairs of the Christmas season was the dance sponsored by the Cotillion club on Friday night at the Hope Country club. For the occasion, the club house which has recently been repaired and refurnished, was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens. The large mantel at the East end of the dance hall was banked with holly and mistle toe, with lighted Christmas candles at either end. A glowing fire in the large fireplace added warmth and cheer to this unusually delightful holiday function. T. H. Crone's 12-piece orchestra furnished the music, and visitors were present from Texarkana, Shreveport, Lewisville, Prescott and Gurdon. A generous donation for charity was realized after all expenses were paid. The Cotillion club, with its sponsor, and the members of the Hope Country club are to be congratulated on the success, in every way, of this Merry Christmas celebration.

W. L. Phillips Is Laid to Rest Here

Services Held for Well Known Hope Man Who Died at 74

Funeral services for W. L. Phillips, 74, who died early Thursday morning at his home in the north part of the city, were held at 3:30 p. m. Thursday with the Rev. Wallace R. Rogers, pastor of First Baptist church officiating. Burial was in Rose Hill cemetery.

Mr. Phillips had been a resident of Hope 35 years, and was engaged in printing and paper hanging.

He is survived by his widow, a daughter, Mrs. Elbert Jones of Hope, a son, Dale Phillips of Little Rock, a sister, Mrs. Jennie Sutton of Sutton, and a brother, Ben Phillips of Prescott.

Attending the funeral from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Alford Cross, Mrs. Roy Davis and Ben Phillips, all of Prescott. Mrs. Jennie Sutton, Mrs. Lloyd Sutton and Mrs. Edgar Wren, all of Sutton; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Brice Phillips and Miss Austeen Phillips, all of Texarkana.

justed weekly index, and similar statistical indicators, has recently topped the level of the summer high tide of manufacturing in 1933, to register new peaks for the recovery. This index in November averaged at 83 per cent of the 1929-30 average, compared with 62.7 a year earlier.

Residential building was still at only 41.4 per cent of 1929-30, as measured by The Associated Press index, but this was more than double the 18.6 per cent level of November, 1934. The movement of freight, one of the basic indicators of the volume of the nation's business, was 67.6, based on 1929-30 as 100, compared with 61.2 for that month of the previous year.

Auto Manufacture Gains

One of the most striking gains in recent months has been in automobile production, and this involves an innumerable factor. New models went into production two months earlier than usual this year. As a result, November output was substantially more than double a year previously.

A contrasasonal lift given to aggregate industrial activity. The seasonally adjusted index of steel production, for instance, was boosted in November to 71.3 per cent of the 1929-30 average, compared with 35.6 in that month of 1934.

Despite the relatively depressed state of several lines of heavy or capital goods industry, 1935 brought many indications of growing breadth to the recovery movement. Purchasing power was more widely diffused. There was no such disruption of the forward march as that caused by the severe drought in 1934.

Japan Moving On

while the Soviet Union dominates Outer Mongolia.

The new military campaign has been carried out under the pretext of delimiting the "ambiguous" boundary between Manchoukuo and Mongolia.

A recent border clash at the frontier post of Balum-Bersun, in which several Mongolian soldiers were killed by Japanese and Manchoukuo invaders, was regarded as merely the first incident to attract outside notice. Moscow dispatches early Sunday quoted reports from Khabarovsk, reaching the Russian capital through official Soviet channels, as stating the Japanese army in Manchoukuo was considering a plan to invade Outer Mongolia.

Articles in the Nationalist press, notably the newspaper Miyako, indicated that at strong militarist-imperialist faction in Japan envisions extension of the campaign as far as expulsion of Soviet influence from Sinkiang, as well as Outer Mongolia.

Into such an effort the militarists, it appeared, would draw China, invoking the latter's long-ineffective sovereignty over those vast outlying provinces as an excuse for use of Japanese military power—ostensibly on China's behalf and in an alliance with China—to oust Soviet penetration.

Thus far there is no evidence that the civilian element in Tokyo's government approves such ambitions, although Miyako asserts Foreign Minister Koki Hirota intends to negotiate in Nanking and Peiping for such a Sino-Japanese anti-Soviet alliance.

Retail Trade in Slight 1935 Gain

Year Will Close 5 to 15% Ahead of 1934, Authorities Predict

By RADER WINGET
Associated Press Correspondent
NEW YORK—(AP)—Like a cork on the crest of a wave, retail trade rode high in 1935 with the surge of general recovery.

The merchandising business entered the year at high tide, post holiday sales carrying dollar value of volume to satisfying peaks, and the Easter shopping period emptied shelves in many cities.

By the time that buying wave had subsided, retailers were moving summer goods to vacation-bound customers.

There was in industry a mid-year let down which was reflected in the stores in most sections, but after the independence day holiday industrial wheels began to hum with a sharper rhythm, and merchants profited from faster payrolls.

Fall was a trying time for many. Wet weather, dust storms, floods and other hindrances cut into retail trade substantially, but even so there was no nation-wide recession. Some cities experienced large sales while others dropped well below the corresponding period of the previous year.

Thanksgiving week disclosed a sagging tendency in the east but buoyancy in the mid-west, south and west coast sections. But a sharp rebound followed, and Christmas holiday shopping established six-year records in some cities while others passed the previous year with ease. Merchants reported their customers were buying more than in 1934, and demand was in evidence for better quality articles along with higher priced goods such as home furnishings and the more expensive wearing apparel. On the average, authorities predicted a final check of 1935 should show a 5 to 15 per cent increase over 1934 for the country as a whole in retail trade.

WE DRIVERS

A Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Dedicated to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public. Prepared by General Motors

No. 9—COUNTRY DRIVING

IN DISCUSSING DRIVERS we spoke of our cars as transportation systems... our own private railroads, so to speak, with home for our terminal. As a rule we engineers behind the steering wheel work only on local runs... back and forth from the office, stores, and the rest of our regular stops. But every now and then, and especially when vacation time rolls around, we're likely to want to change our run. And one fine day there we are, out on the main line, at the throttle of our "Overland Limited." If you please.

Railroads put only their best engineers on important runs like that. What the railroad men mean by the best engineer, is the one who has taken his train out and brought it in, time after time, year after year, without a thing to regret. Now there's one thing about this engineer that explains his good record better than anything else. He believes in signs. All along the way there are signals that tell him what to do, and he does exactly what they say. When a semaphore says slow down, he slows down.

Whenever he gets the sign of a curve or grade, he adjusts his speed accordingly. Every red and green and amber light that comes twinkling through the darkness means a definite order that he'd better dream of ignoring. And when a flare warns him of danger, he just stops until he gets the go-ahead. Now, when we pull out of our station and on to the main track, if we are good engineers we'll take good heed of our signals as they come flashing by—"Curve," "Sleep Hill," "Red Light," "Stop." But along comes one that says "Intersection," and there doesn't happen to be any car passing on that other road. Or one that says "Slow," and there aren't any children about. Or "Slippery when wet," but today the road is dry. And what's the result? Why, a good many of us get to taking those signals with a grain of salt, and after a while with so much salt that if we aren't careful those warnings may lose their meaning. It isn't hard to imagine what would happen if the railroad engineer got into that habit. He wouldn't be an engineer very long. No matter how many times his warnings prove unnecessary, he still goes on accepting them as gospel truth.

And people who drive thousands of miles every year tell us they have trained themselves to the very same habits as the engineers. We can just as easily form one habit as the other, and it pays to form the habit of automatically acting on the advice of our roadside signs.

So it isn't enough just to have our engine in good shape, and to watch our fuel and oil, or even to follow the rule of not driving too many hours at a stretch. Those things are highly important, but it is just as important to watch for our signals and follow them religiously. Then we can look forward to sending back that ever-welcome message—"Arrived safe after pleasant trip."

Townsend Plan Is Scored by Texan

Maverick Says Liberty Leaguers Are Using It as a Lure

WASHINGTON—(AP)—With four more of its backers in races for congressional seats, the Townsend old-age pension plan was denounced Sunday night by Representative Maverick, Democrat, Texas, as "fantastic," "unjust," and capable of bankrupting the nation in two weeks.

The Texan, in a statement sent to the capital from his San Antonio home, termed the plan a "brazen, unconscionable and hopeless demand on the people" which he said prevents the country from attacking fundamental problems.

Maverick said if the Townsend "scheme" meant payment of $200 monthly to all over 60 from a transaction on sales tax, it was the most fantastic proposal ever placed before the country.

The big shot bankers and the Liberty Leaguers who are against the president and against any kind of social security, he said, "are anxious for the Townsend plan to gain popular favor, because they are smart enough to know it is utterly impossible and will muddle the issue, thus destroying all chances of any help at all for older people."

Bible "Best Seller"

LONDON—(AP)—The Bible still tops the list of "best sellers" in the world. Nearly 11,000,000 copies, in whole or part, and printed in 692 languages or dialects, were distributed in 1934 by the British and Foreign Bible society.

The nation's movie fans are familiar with the Hollywood success story of Thelma Todd, a story ended by her mysterious death. But they do not know the Thelma Todd on the set, the Thelma Todd behind the screen. Jeanette Meehan, of the Hollywood staff of NEA Service, has written this absorbing story in two parts, the first of which appears here.

By JEANETTE MEEHAN

NEA Service Special Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD—Beauty, brains, money, friends—Thelma Todd had them all.

The loved Hollywood glamour, its glory, its fame. She loved its romance, its excitement—all the gay Hollywood life.

A metamorphosis possible only in Hollywood was that of the demure little school teacher who came out of Lawrence, Mass., to win national fame in a brilliant career that endured, undimmed, year after year.

The story of her life all has been told. The story that has not been told is that of the real Thelma Todd—her private life on the set and behind the screen.

Although all Hollywood mourns the blond beauty, there is one group of people who, if possible, are a little sadder than all the rest. They are the workers at the Hal Roach studio in Culver City. Not just the big shots, but all the "little shots," too.

Thelma had worked at the Culver City plant for seven years. In truth, she seemed as much a part of the studio as the stages themselves. To everyone, from the messenger boys to Roach, she was "Thelma" or "Toddy."

Cherished Her Friendships With Studio Workers

She loved that—the friendliness she provoked in all those with whom she worked. She valued the common ground on which she stood with each and every person at the studio.

Each time Thelma Todd appeared on the Roach lot after every two-week layoff between comedies, it was like Old Home Week. As she drove in the state she would stop to chat with the policeman on duty there. That jolly fellow unburdened all his joys and tribulations to her.

Thelma was always the first to know when there was a new baby. She was the first to know when the first tooth appeared—and was joyously informed when diapers had become a thing of the past.

Each little incident interested the actress every bit as much as if it had occurred in her own life.

As she alighted from her car and walked across the paved avenue to her dressing room, it was the same story. "From bus boys, carpenters, and studio house came the greeting, 'Hi, Toddy.' On one occasion, only a few weeks ago, a young man in the casting office perceived her entrance, leaned out of his window and bellowed, 'Thanks be, you're back. This burg was getting dull.'

Antics Kept Her Co-Workers In Uproar

You see, Thelma was the studio "out up." Her favorite pastime was ribbing Stax Graves, a serious-minded still man who photographed Thelma for seven years.

She would pose beautifully for him until he leaned down to peer in the camera, whereupon she would let him have a series of horrible faces. It was amazing to see the fantastic images into which Thelma could distort her pretty countenance, and yet, for all her antics, all the boys at the studios where she has worked agreed that she was the most willing camera subject in Hollywood.

She loved those comedies because she had such a heck of a good time making them. All concerned enjoyed their production. Out of fairness to Thelma, the fun was mostly of her own making. She clowning all over the place. No fall or comedy stunt was too strenuous for her to perform. She came to the studio with many bruises, but although the studio urged it, she would not hear of a stand-in or a double. Had she been of a less gracious disposition, she might easily have made the shooting schedules a trial to everyone.

Frank Jars Nerves of Publicity Director

One day, when Sam Cohen had been on the lot as publicity director only a week, he walked onto the set where Thelma was working.

She was sitting on a parallel about six feet above the ground. A stack of dishes were beside her. She was not in the scene.

She waited until the director called "Camera," then she called out, "Catch 'em, Sam," and one by one she threw the plates to the nervous man who had to catch them—or else. Who cared if the "take" was ruined as long as the beautiful blond comedienne kept them in good humor? Every afternoon, when the day's work was finished, Thelma and Patsy Kelly raced to the projection room to see yesterday's rushes.

There they laughed their heads off at each other. Patsy thought her starring partner was the most marvelous comedienne in the world, and vice versa.

Noted for Generosity and Kindness

Thelma Todd was generous to a fault. If a person so much as expressed admiration of something in her possession, perhaps a bottle of perfume or a piece of jewelry or a new gown, the article was usually presented to her on the spot.

If anyone on the lot of little means was injured or needed medical attention, Thelma always arranged it, and arranged it so that the person never knew whence came his help.

One day she received a note from a boy on the lot who had a pair of badly infected tonsils removed. The bill had been paid for him.

The note read, "All three of my guesses are Thelma Todd. Bless you."

And the boy was right. To measure the esteem in which Thelma Todd was held by her co-workers, you need to know only this: she was buried Thursday, December 19, dressed in a pair of blue chiffon and satin pajamas made up hand for her as a Christmas present by a woman in the studio wardrobe department.

NEXT: The recent personal life of Thelma Todd, her screen work, her cafe venture, her friendships.

Drug Fortune Heir Reported Missing

Allen Upjohn, 19, Vanishes—But No Fear of Kidnap Gang

NEW YORK—Allen Upjohn, 19, heir to the Upjohn drug millions, has been missing since last December 4, it was revealed Sunday in a confidential memorandum sent police departments throughout the nation by private detectives conducting a search for the boy.

The confidential memorandum gave the known facts of the youth's mysterious disappearance, but his wealthy family did not ask official police intervention. They did not believe he had been kidnaped.

The private detectives said that young Upjohn visited his family at Kalamazoo, Mich., on Thanksgiving day. He appeared downcast, they said, because he had flunked several subjects at Pittsburgh University.
